Anthelio Healthcare Solutions , the largest independent provider of technology and services to hospitals, physician practice groups and other healthcare providers, announced the appointment of Suresh Ramani as Chief Technology Officer (CTO) for Anthelio Healthcare Solutions. Suresh will focus on leading innovative technology solutions and assessing new product opportunities. He will be a key instrument in driving product development and support for Anthelio's core products – Patient Pulse, Engage, Patient Information Exchange and Legacy Archive. Additionally, Suresh will also be responsible for overall products software support including the foundation for the Analytics platform.

“Anthelio promotes a unified and cohesive global team, Suresh’s deep operational expertise and experience in building integrated solutions backed by leading technology is critical to promoting product enhancements that benefit our customers. Suresh brings with him extensive experience in managing client engagements from multiple geographies across various verticals including banking and financial services, healthcare, travel, transportation and hospitality,” said Asif Ahmad, CEO Anthelio Healthcare Solutions.

Suresh has held various executive leadership positions including, President/Chief Operating Officer, with Intelenet Global Services (now a part of Serco Group PLC), where he headed their international businesses across the U.S., Guatemala and Mauritius. He worked on strategic initiatives to build delivery capabilities in Healthcare BPO and IT outsourcing.

“With the growing changes in the US healthcare industry and hospitals looking for innovative solutions, the timing is just right for Anthelio to bring about a transformational approach in the way we develop and deploy our products and services,” said Suresh Ramani.

“Suresh will continue in his role as Country Head–India for Anthelio,” said Asif Ahmad. “He was appointed Country Head in January 2014 and has built a strong, customer-centric and innovative team. I am confident that in his expanded role of CTO & Country Head-India, he will continue promoting our aggressive efforts of expanding products that provide sustained value to our customers,” said Asif Ahmad.
