Anthelio Partners with Schoolcraft College to Create ICD-10 Coder Education and Training Program

Dallas, Texas, November 20, 2013 — Anthelio Healthcare Solutions, the largest independent provider of technology and services to hospitals, physician practice groups and other healthcare providers today announced a cost-efficient, compliance-driven Clinical Modification/Procedure Coding System (ICD-10-CM/PCS) education and training program for Schoolcraft College. Schoolcraft College is a comprehensive, open door, community-based college located in Livonia, Michigan.

“As a leader in providing coding solutions in the healthcare industry, Anthelio understands the importance of preparing coders for the scope and complexity of an ICD-10 transition,” said Asif Ahmad, CEO, Anthelio Healthcare Solutions. “Having highly skilled coders will help ensure that hospitals do not suffer deep loss of revenue.”

As the healthcare industry transitions from ICD-9 to ICD-10, it is becoming difficult to find qualified coders. The training and education course developed by Anthelio comprises three distinct phases including seminars and hands-on training. This multi-phase approach to education is deployed for Professional Development students via innovative e-learning software application. The training program is designed to help prepare students become proficient with ICD-10-CM/PCS.

Hospitals and other healthcare providers have until October 2014 to achieve ICD-10 compliance. The objective of ICD-10-CM/PCS program at Schoolcraft College is to prepare participants for the ICD-10-CM/PCS update. Anthelio’s partnership with Schoolcraft enables the College to harness the capabilities and expertise of Anthelio’s ICD-10-CM/PCS AHIMA certified trainers.

“We are excited to expand our scope of educational offerings through our partnership with Schoolcraft College,” said Asif Ahmad. “Anthelio’s strong team of ICD-10 educators, are committed to the professional development of coders and are prepared to address the coding challenges facing the Healthcare Industry.”
